wǽpen-getæc, -tak, es; n. A wapentake, a term used in northern England where in the south hundred was used: 'Quod alii vocant hundredum, supradicti comitatus (counties northward from Northamptonshire) vocant wapentagium,' L. Ed. C. 30; Th. i. 455. The word, which seems of Danish origin (cf. Icel. vápna-tak, though this is used in a different sense), is thus explained in the document above cited: Cum quis accipiebat prefecturam wapentagii, die statuto in loco ubi consueverant congregari, omnes majores natu contra eum conveniebant, et, descendente eo de equo suo, omnes assurgebant ei. Ipse vero erecta lancea sua, ab omnibus, secundum morem, foedus accipiebat: omnes enim quotquot venissent cum lanceis suis ipsius hastam tangebant, et ita se confirmabant per contactum armorum, pace palam concessa. Anglice vero arma vocantur wapen, et taccare confirmare, quasi armorum confirmacio, vel ut magis expresse, secundum linguam Anglicam, dicamus wapentac, i. e. armorum tactus: wapen enim arma sonat, tac tactus est. Quamobrem potest cognosci quod hec de causa totus ille conventus dicitur wapentac, eo quod per tactum armorum suorum ad invicem confoederates sunt. On this explanation see Stubbs' Const. Hist. i. 99 sqq.: — Wé willaþ ðæt man namige on ælcon wǽpengetæce .ii. trywe þegnas, L. N. P. L. 57; Th. ii. 298, 31. worsm. v. worms.

worþ, weorþ, wurþ, wierþ, wyrþ, e; f.: es; m.: wyrþe, wirþe (v. wyrþe-land, and first extract under I), es; m. I. a close (?), an enclosed place (?):—Ût on rigewyrðe (the rye-close?) westeweardne, Cod. Dip. Kmbl. iii. 437, 35. Uppan rigeweorðe on ða ealdan dîc; of ðære dîc ût on rigewurðe heal, v. 377, 21. On lindwyrðe, iii. 375, 6. II. an enclosed homestead, a habitation with surrounding land:—Be hagan on weorðe hege; forð be ðan hege on weordapeldre, Cod. Dip. Kmbl. v. 381, 30. Tô ealdan wyrðe . . . wiđ westan ealdan wyrðe, 195, 3–5. Ondlang hîweges tô Ecguuines wyrðe, iii. 437, 32. Tô Cumbran weorðe; of Cumbran weorðe tô ðære mæran æc, 78, 35. ¶ perhaps in the last two passages weorþ may be regarded as the second part of a compound name: such expressions as 'in loco ubi soliculae illius regionis Ægleswurð nomen imposuerunt' are not uncommon in the Charters, and such names seem to have remained. In the index of places given in Cod. Dip. Kmbl. vi. 251 sqq. about 70 combinations with weorþ occur, and for many of these modern representatives terminating in -worth are found. Already places whose names contain the form (cf. those with tûn), when they are mentioned in the Charters, may have extended beyond their original limits and have become properties, whose area was considerable (e. g. Hê gean ðæra hundtwýntiga hîda æt Wyrðæ, Cod. Dip. Kmbl. iii. 127, 15. Brinkewurða terra est .v. hidarum, iv. 167, 1. Æt Æscmæres-weorðæ (-wyrðe, l. 14), .x. hida, v. 218, 22), whose boundaries consequently had to be defined (e. g. Đis syndon ða landgemæro tô wyrðe, vi. 8, 25. Tô Ceorles-wyrðe, iii. 458, 3. Tô Ægeles-uurðe, 428, 18. Tô Æscmêres-wierðe, v. 173, 36. Tô Peádanwyrðe, 383, 8), and upon which a number of persons resided (e. g. .xxx. mansas illic ubi Anglica appellatione dicitur æt Wurðe (Weorðe, 329, 32), v. 395, 13. Quarta terra .iii. manentium, et uocatur Gistheresuuyrth, i. 44, 11. Monasterium quod situm est in loco qui dicitur æt Baedricesworth, ii. 258, 25: iii. 272, 10: 305, 11. In Blacewyrðe .v. mansas). Various Latin words are used in speaking of such places; Wealawrđ is a villula, iii. 347, 11: v. 346, 33: Æbbewyrđ is a uiculus, iv. 164, 8–10: Æscmeresweord is a villa, v. 216, 10: Gistheresuuyrth is a terra, i. 44, 11, so also Brinkeuurða, iv. 167, 1, and Deceuurthe, ii. 367, 22–23: Ceolwurđ is spoken of as aliquantulum terrae, ii. 135, 16, 22: and Oswald grants aliquam telluris partem æt Bynnyncgwyrðe, iii. 177, 23. Corresponding to these last terms are the English forms with land: Ic gean ðara twêgra landa Cærlesweorþæ and Cochanfelde, iii. 274, 4. Ic gean ðara twêgra landa æt Cohhanfeldæa and æt Cærlesweorþe, 272, 8. Dæt land æt Ægeleswyrðe, 125, 10. Some passages are added which may further illustrate the different forms and the variation in gender:—In loco quae dicitur Meranwurđ, Txts. 437, 10. Ab occidente Hodowurđa, Cod. Dip. Kmbl. ii. 49, 18. Oslanwyrđ and eall dæt đærtô gebyreþ, v. 267, 36. Andlang Æðeleswyrðe, 195, 3. Tô Lulleswyrðe hyrnan, iii. 343, 31. Tô Uffawyrda gemære, 428, 22. Tô ðan nordran Denceswurðe . . . ða þreó hîda on ðan nordran Denceswurðe, v. 310, 34–36. Deneceswyrðe, 400, 12. On Cwicelmeswyrðe eástwearde, iii. 344, 7: v. 121, 6. Ôt Bulonweorðe; of Bulanweorðe, iii. 343, 37. On Hananwurðe, 403, 11. On tûnlesweorþ eastweardne, 425, 22, 28. On Wulfrêdeswyrđ; of Wulfrêdeswyrðe, iv. 103, 13. III. a place enclosed by buildings, a court or hall of a house, a place or street of a town:—Hê sæt ûta in worðe sedebat foris in atrio, Mt. Kmbl. Lind. 26, 69: Mk. Skt. Rush. 14, 66. worþig, weorþig, wurþig, wyrþ g [Ps. Surt. has forms as from worðign; one such form is found in Ps. Syl. C., and a dative wordine occurs in Bd. S. 539, 42], es; m. I. this word, which remains in proper names in the form -worthy, has much the same meaning as worþ (q. v.), and seems sometimes to exchange with it (cf. In Beniguurthia, Cod. Dip. Kmbl. i. 70, 27, with: In loco qui dicitur Beminguuyrth, ii. 152, 19). In its simplest application it seems to mean an enclosed homestead:—Be Ceorles weordige (weordige, v. l.). Ceorles weordig (weordi, wurdig, v. ll.) sceal beón wintres and sumeres betýned. Gif hê bið untýned, and recð his neáhgebûres ceápe in on his âgen geat, nâh hê æt ðam ceápe nânwuht, L. In. 40; Th. i. 126, 12–16. But it is found also in connection with land of considerable extent (e. g. Trium cassatorum in loco qui dicitur Wordi (cf. tô Wordie, 34), Cod. Dip. Kmbl. v. 109, 7. Đis synd ða landgemæra tô Wordige, 110, 32. .v. cassatos in loco qui appellatur æt Wordige (Wordie, 120, 5), 118, 31), and where there are habitations of considerable importance (e. g. Ego Offa rex sedens in regali palatio in Tamouuorthige, i. 172, 19. Tamouuordie, 171, 6. In loco celeberrimo quae a vulgo vocatur Tomewordige, 238, 11). Various Latin words are used in reference to places in whose names the word occurs:—In uico celeberrimo qui vocatur Tomouuordig, i. 256, 24. In uilla omnibus notissima quae Wordig nuncupatur, v. 199, 10. Rura . . . Tantun . . . , Uuordig, . . . Stoke, iii. 155, 27. .viii. mansas agelluli, ibidem ubi uulgares prisco more uocitant æt Wordige, v. 240, 9. Wordig, vi. 244, 13, is agellus in the body of the Charter, iv. 150, 26. In Bd. 3, 14 a vico Cataractone is in English fram Cetrihtwordige (-wordine, v. l.), S. 539, 42. Other instances of the use of the word in reference to localities are the following:—Unam mansam loco qui celebri æt Monowyrdige appellatur. . . . Đis synd ðære âre hŷde landgemêru tô Monawurdige. Ærust on Monawurdiges forde, vi. 57, 9–15. Ofer ðæt hâfd wid Cyblesweordiges, Cod. Dip. Kmbl. iii. 392, 5. Sûd tô Ellewurdie, vi. 194, 11. Of ðam ealdan lace on Burhgeardeswordig, iii. 412, 12. Instances of the independent use of the word are the following:—Wurdig (worþig, weorþi, v. ll.) fundus, Ælfc. Gr. 8; Zup. 28, 12. Worþig predium, Wrt. Voc. i. 84, 59. Hió an ðæs worðiges, Cod.
